by Decision Analyst, Inc.
Commissioned by LegalShield

About the Study

This study of full-time employees in the U.S. was conducted over the Internet.

A national probability sample of males and females aged 18 to 64 was drawn from American Consumer Opinion® Online, Decision Analyst's worldwide panel of over eight million consumers. The sample was balanced by geography and selected demographics such as gender, age, ethnicity, and household income. Panelists were invited by email to the screening survey, and those employed full-time were invited to Decision Analyst's DAISurvey™ website to participate in the study.

A total of 1,000 interviews were completed online in 2013.

57 Million Americans Have Legal Issues

(That's a Whole Lot of People)

The Legal Needs Of American Families Study (Legal Needs Study) shows that working Americans and their families face a myriad of legal issues on almost a daily basis.

The study shows that 57 million full-time working Americans experienced at least one significant legal event in the past 12 months, but only 60% of those who experienced such an event actually sought out the services of a lawyer to help them.

The areas of greatest need identified in the survey include auto and traffic issues such as traffic tickets and accidents, family issues such as adoption and divorce, and estate planning concerns such as wills, trusts, and estate or inheritance management.

The Legal Needs Study also shows that legal problems know no economic boundaries. All income levels experience legal issues or events at about the same rate: 66%.

Many Americans Go It Alone

The Legal Needs Study shows that Americans forgo or avoid legal help because of cost, access, and trust issues. According to survey results, 93% of respondents believe lawyers charge too much for their services.

Respondents reported paying an average hourly rate of $284, with nearly 25% paying in excess of $400 per hour. Additionally, nearly 20% did not know their attorney's hourly rate.

Seventy-two percent of respondents believe that most lawyers are difficult to reach by phone and 63% believe that most lawyers are not responsive. An overwhelming 76% of respondents said that they were hesitant to call a lawyer.

Seventy-four percent said they dread the thought of talking to a lawyer, and 72% said that most lawyers will try to take advantage of you.

The Legal Needs Study also indicates that Americans have a difficult time finding a qualified attorney to help them. Sixty-seven percent of respondents reported that they did not know a lawyer to call prior to needing one. The remainder said they found an attorney randomly through an online search, the Yellow Pages, or some sort of advertising.

Legal Service Plans Offer Solution

Despite facing significant legal issues on a regular basis, the Legal Needs Study shows that few Americans are proactive in taking steps to get the legal protection they need for themselves and their families.

9 out of 10 respondents said if cost were more affordable, they would seek legal advice for even trivial issues such as a traffic ticket or the review of a rental agreement.

At the same time, however,

Nearly 90% of Americans say they don't have any form of legal insurance or legal protection service that could make getting qualified legal help easy and affordable.

Even more troubling is the fact that two-thirds of Americans say they have never heard of any such plans or services.

When asked if they would be willing to pay $20 per month to have unlimited access to qualified attorneys at an accomplished law firm for advice and counsel on legal issues no matter how serious or trivial,

More than 60% reported they would be interested in purchasing legal protection.

This number increased to 70% when a 50/50 split in cost with their employer was factored in.

This figure is significant to employers, considering that 66% of respondents reported they had to take at least one day off from work in the past year to deal with one or more legal issues.

Respondents reported that they had better peace of mind and were less distracted at work when they had a legal protection plan in place.

However, only 13% of these working Americans and families have some type of legal service through work, and of that group 93% responded that they are satisfied with their jobs with this benefit being one of the reasons.

Of the respondents who have a legal benefits plan, an average of 75% are very satisfied with their coverage.

70% of respondents with a legal benefits plan said they use the service more than three times per year.
